Client Feedback

- Small styling change:
 - Remove “Fav” header from dashboard
- Make coach name clickable on email details shown on user profile
- Final profile pages formatting looks great
- Email history and details on user profile is nicely displayed
- Implementation of pagination library w/ dashboard looks good
- All looks great, especially with changes made based on feedback from mid-iteration

Planned Iteration 3 Features

Research on bulk actions and best privacy actions:

- Allow filtered by favorites and custom tags
- Implement dynamic email vs static
 - Give users permission to send actual emails vs “test” emails
 - Use React email
 - Add dev coaches to FireDB for debugging actual emails are sent
- Implement bulk and tags to schools and coaches
 - Add to current sidebar
- Do research and best practices for privacy/security actions in allowing to show full email thread and allow user to respond to end of thread
 - Sending emails as user and reading user’s emails

Retrospection

- What does each team member think about this iteration? (i.e., lessons learnt)

Owen - Custom components proved very useful this iteration. I didn't realize how much redundant code was in our solution until I started abstracting with custom components.

Tierra - Testing our code during this iteration was an incredibly trying time, but if I had communicated earlier with the other people working on testing, I wouldn't have been spinning my wheels for so long.

Priscilla - I really enjoyed adding user's personal info and storing that in FireDB ensuring it's connecting with firestore hooks & learning how testing works with FireDB

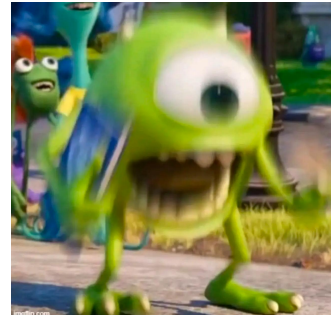

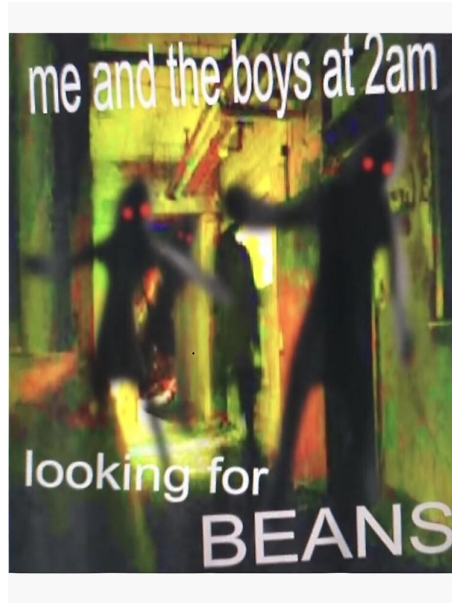

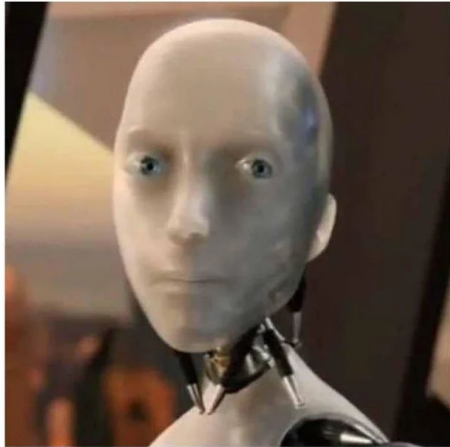

Emmaline - It's much better to ask the client for guidance rather than powering through the logic of coding something by hand (i.e. recreating the wheel). Bryce provided a pagination library for us as inspiration but it was deprecated; I should've communicated earlier that it was deprecated.

Lizzie - Always plan for failure as with most things, accounting for the time to fix mistakes should be part of the plan. Spent a few days fixing errors in our tests and an earlier branch of adding a sidebar.

- What kind of properties of quality software did you sacrifice for the sake of functional software?
 - We didn't look into packaging libraries early enough in the iteration
- How do you plan to approach iteration 3?
 - Planning ahead early again and constant communion with our clients, ask for any help as soon as possible
